

Results – addendum

- Centralized commitment minimizes costs across assets and produces cost-effective commitment decisions
- Production cost estimates suggest centralized commitment logic, compared to self-commitment, may yield slight efficiency gains depending on forecast assumptions

Source: projections calculated by the AESO

Note: Input costs exclude expenses related to debt servicing and carrying capital costs. Ancillary Service costs include dispatch for capacity and directive for energy (as required).